

During our time trading with the Risco group we have always found them to be highly professional, highly motivated and competitively priced. Working with them, we have found them to be a dynamic, forward-thinking company that responds promptly and delivers a high level of service that we can always rely on.

Their internal staff have always been polite and very efficient and are always keen to help, with no request however big or small being dealt with in any other way than professionally.

Rob Evans your UK Sales Director has always made every effort to ensure that we are made aware of any new technological innovations he feels that we may benefit from and has always done so with a no pressure sales approach which in this day and age is most refreshing. Rob always gives the impression that nothing is too much trouble and on more than one occasion he has literally gone out of his way to help.

The Risco group is viewed as an important part of the Abel Alarm company supplier base and long may this continue.
